Fungi Foray

Sunday 26 June 2022

Belair National Park, 10.00am to 1.00pm

On this field trip, the Adelaide Fungal Studies Group will lead us on a Fungi Foray.

On the foray we will look for fungi, note the characteristics that help in identifying them, collect representative specimens, and take them to a collection point (The Volunteers' Centre) at around noon. There we will look at them in further detail.

The Fungi Foray is always a lot of fun and learning - and you will be amazed at the variety of fungi that we will discover and identify.

Upon arrival at the Park, let the person on the gate know that you are part of our group. We will have free entry to the park so you will not need to pay for your car. Please cut out the sign below and put in on your dashboard when you arrive. Then drive to the Volunteers' Centre, ready for us to start at 10am.

Please try to arrive 15 minutes beforehand as we will be setting off in a number of convoys to go to various sites where we will be collecting fungi. If you are running late, there will be someone at the Centre to direct you to one of the general areas where we will be.

Cameras and smart phones will be useful, particularly for taking photographs of the underside of the fungi to aid in identification.

You might like to bring lunch to have at the park afterwards. And don't forget to wrap up warmly!
